Welcome to Armonk, New York

Wampus Pond, Armonk

Located 35 miles from Manhattan, the hamlet of Armonk makes up more than two-thirds of North Castle, a sprawling 26-square-mile town that encompasses two other hamlets, Banksville and North White Plains.

Armonk's most desirable neighborhood is Windmill Farms. The site of a 1,000-acre farm 40 years ago, the land was developed in stages, resulting in 350 homes ranging from small colonials and ranches to larger Victorians, many of them on the farm's five lakes or clustered around a windmill.

History

Settled in the early 17th century by Quakers fleeing religious persecution, Armonk, a derivation of a Siwanoy Indian name, remained a farming community for much of the next 200 years. The railroad passed it by, and so did the industrial revolution.

It was the perfect location for the estates of wealthy New Yorkers. And New York City officials bought vast acreage for their developing water system, building the Kensico Reservoir in North White Plains in 1915.

Today, Armonk remains an area of rugged beauty, with stretches of protected open space. It is bordered by Interstate 684 and Route 22 and is surrounded by seven communities, including Greenwich, Conn.

Education

The Byram Hills Central School District serves North Castle, New Castle, Mount Pleasant, and Bedford. All of the schools in the district are located in Armonk. The district has one high school, Byram Hills High School (for students in grades 9-12), one middle school, H. C. Crittenden Middle School (grades 6-8), and two primary schools, Wampus Elementary School (grades 3-5) and Coman Hill Elementary School (grades K-2).
